

Ether Hill & Queenwood

It is believed that Ether Hill was used as a site for the local gallows during the 14th century and stood as a terrible warning to anyone thinking of breaking the law; Ether Hill was chosen for the site of the gallows as it could be seen from miles around. This large wooded area mainly consists of deciduous trees that form and surround Ether Hill, and a frame work of bridle ways and paths (formal and informal) connect with other open spaces. Ether Hill is a great destination for all the family whatever their age, with views across Queenwood Golf course with the woodland itself skirting the Ottershaw Memorial Fields.

The award winning Ottershaw Memorial Fields were donated to the council by William James King on agreement this open space remained for the recreation and enjoyment of the residents. The memorial grounds have a natural setting with a wide range of recreational facilities for the local community. The site is staffed seven days a week and is open to the public at all times.

The Ottershaw Memorial Fields are well laid out with the woodland area acting as a backdrop to the sports facilities and open space. There is a wide range of facilities to choose from including changing rooms for people of all ages and multi use rooms which are used by local groups such as the weightlifters, highland dancers, weight watchers and local play groups. The local scout and guide groups have use of the building to the east of the bowling green and often use the woodland for their activities. The bowling green itself is accessible from the entrance at the western end of the park.

Other leisure facilities include a children's play area and multi use games court located away from the pavilion accessed from car park 2 (see map).
